Rosslyn students look to next year's changes with optimism

If I had a hammer ...

Students tried their hand at various trades during the 2012 Provincial Skills Canada Competition held at Edmonton's EXPO Centre, May10 and 11. The Try-a-Trade demonstrations give students the opportunity to learn about the unique skills required for trades such as carpentry, culinary arts, and brick masonry.

CANADA

CANADIAN LEADERSHIP | TRAVAILLONS ENSEMBLE

△ MOURNING JACK On August 22, Canadians across the country were surprised to learn that NDP leader Jack Layton had succumbed to a recurrence of cancer. He was 61. Layton, who had been elected leader of the opposition just months before, wrote a letter to the country, entrusted to his wife MP Olivia Chow, in which he encouraged Canadians to be "loving, hopeful and optimistic. And we will change the world." Chow and her family, as well as the NDP party, received an outpouring of support in traditional ways as well as on various forms of social media from Canadians coast to coast. (THE CANADIAN PRESS/Darren Calabrese)

△ ROUGH YEAR FOR RIM After a tough 2010, the business world watched to see if Research in Motion (RIM) would rally in 2011. Not so. RIM faced disappointment after disappointment; they endured everything from poor product reception from the market and inevitable lay-offs, to being robbed of just over $1 million in stock from a Mississauga, Ontario warehouse. Here's hoping for a better year in 2012. Fingers crossed for the BlackBerry and PlayBook upgrades. (THE CANADIAN PRESS/Ryan Remiorz)

△ ROYAL WELCOME As if the royal wedding wasn't exciting enough, the newlywed Duke and Duchess of Cambridge also made Canada the destination of their first royal tour. Will and Kate celebrated the nation's birthday in Ottawa (where Kate scored big points for her maple leaf fascinator) before carrying on to Quebec, Prince Edward Island, Northwest Territories and finally Alberta. The couple ended their trip with a brief visit to California before returning home to England. (THE CANADIAN PRESS/Nathan Denette)

△ A TRIUMPHANT RETURN It is no secret that hockey is Canada's game – with NHL teams across the country, fans live and die by the season and the standings. Finally Winnipeg can rejoin the ranks of home cities the likes of Vancouver, Calgary, Edmonton, Ottawa, Toronto and Montreal. The Jets, previously the Atlanta Thrashers, have been absent from their rink since 1996; they were welcomed back to Winnipeg for the 2011-2012 season by jubilant fans who can look forward to decades of pride for their piece of the national hockey world. (THE CANADIAN PRESS/John Woods)

△ STRIKE POSITION Planning a party last year had the potential to be tricky – with the Canada Post and Air Canada strikes, mailing invitations and making travel plans wasn't easy. In June, unionized postal workers staged rotating strikes, until they were legislated back to work late in the month, with wages for new employees, sick days and future plans as sticking points. On the airline side, 3800 sales and service agents were out for three days, also in June, before reaching a tentative agreement. Disruption to Air Canada passengers was minimal. (THE CANADIAN PRESS/Sean Kilpatrick)

▷ COSTLY TRAGEDY From Saturday, May 14 until Monday, May 16, a massive fire ripped through the community of Slave Lake in northern Alberta. All 7000 residents were evacuated and roughly a third of the town destroyed, including 374 properties, city hall and the library. The damage is estimated at more than $700 million, making it the largest insured disaster in Canadian history. In November, an RCMP probe concluded that the fire, known as Fire 65, was the result of arson. (THE CANADIAN PRESS/Ian Jackson)

◁ UNPRECEDENTED VICTORY May 2 was a good night for Prime Minister Stephen Harper. In a landslide majority seldom seen in Canada's history, the incumbent leader was reseated as both head of the country and the Conservative party. In addition, the New Democratic Party beat out the Liberals as the official opposition for the first time ever, leaving the Grits to rebuild, starting with a new party leader. (THE CANADIAN PRESS/Jeff McIntosh)

◁ #OCCUPY Since mid-September, protesters in cities around the world have joined the Occupy movement. Their mandate is to make the economy and power relations in society fair for the masses. The first protest began in New York City with Occupy Wall Street, and within a few weeks, 95 cities in 82 countries (including Washington, Cairo, Cape Town, Mexico City, Rio de Janeiro, Tel Aviv, London, and Tokyo) were part of the movement. In Canada, cities large (think Toronto, Calgary, Vancouver) and small (think St. John's, London, Windsor) and from coast to coast saw Occupy protests. (THE CANADIAN PRESS/Chris Young)

△ NO JOKE Comedian Rick Mercer made waves last October, but not for his usual funny business. Following the suicide of bullied Ottawa teen Jamie Hubley, Mercer reached out to Canadians in a rant on his weekly show, The Mercer Report, railing against bullying. The segment, where Mercer stated that the 300 teen suicides a year "is 300 too many," went viral and earned praise for its message. Mercer subtly commented on the government's own anti-suicide campaign, It Gets Better, stating "we have to make it better now." (Kevin Van Paassen/The Globe and Mail)

WORLD

△ WEDDING FOR THE AGES Not since the nuptials of Prince Charles to Lady Diana Spencer has there been such fuss over a royal wedding than when the world watched Charles and Diana's firstborn, Prince William, marry his princess, Catherine (Kate) Middleton. On April 29, 2011, the pair exchanged vows at Westminster Abbey in London, England, and became the Duke and Duchess of Cambridge in front of almost 2,000 of their closest family and friends, a million onlookers lining the streets of London, and two billion worldwide viewers who witnessed their "I dos" and the now-famous kiss on the balcony of Buckingham Palace. (Abaca Press/MCT)

△ RALLY CRY A series of protests and demonstrations in the Middle East and Northern Africa, also dubbed "Arab Spring," started in Tunisia in January 2011 when the president of the country was forced out after 23 years in power. Rulers in Egypt, Libya and Yemen have also left office. Since then there have been uprisings all over the Arab world, with rallies and riots in Algeria, Bahrain, Iraq, Jordan, Kuwait, Lebanon, Mauritania, Morocco, Oman, Saudi Arabia, Sudan and Syria. (AP Photo/Hasan Jamali)

△ WORLD'S MOST WANTED Osama bin Laden, the founder of Al-Qaeda – the militant Islamist organization responsible for the September 11, 2001 attacks on the United States – and one of the FBI's most wanted terrorists, was captured and killed in Pakistan on May 2, 2011. The 54-year-old fugitive was shot when a team of U.S. Navy SEALs raided his compound, located a couple hours away from Islamabad. He died four months before the 10-year anniversary of 9/11. (Balkis Press/Abaca Press/MCT)

▽ REBEL WIN Former Libyan dictator and leader, Muammar Gaddafi, was captured and killed by rebel soldiers in October. Gaddafi, who is best known for the havoc he wreaked in the Middle East by trying to instigate wars and secure weapons of mass destruction, ruled over the country for more than 30 years. The Libyan National Liberation Army killed Gaddafi in his hometown, Sirte. He was 69. (WORLD NEWS LIBYA 2 ABA)

△ TRAGEDY IN NORWAY Thirty-two-year-old Norwegian extremist Anders Behring Breivik was the man behind one of the worst massacres in the country's history. In July 2011, he both planned and carried out a car bomb in Oslo in front of the prime minister's office, killing eight, as well as an open-fire attack at a youth summer camp on Utøya Island, killing 69 people.Though Breivik admitted to the attacks, he pleaded not guilty. His trial starts in spring 2012. (AP Photo/Lefteris Pitarakis)

△ A ROYAL MILESTONE Queen Elizabeth II celebrates her diamond jubilee in 2012, marking her 60th anniversary on the throne. The Queen stepped into her royal role upon the death of her father, King George VI, on February 6, 1952, when she was just 25. To commemorate this landmark moment, celebrations are planned in the 16 sovereign states she continues to reign over. Canada fêtes Her Majesty with tributes across the country, and plans to host the Queen's son, Prince Charles, and his wife Camilla, the Duchess of Cornwall, in Saskatchewan, Ontario and New Brunswick in May 2012. △ POP GOES THE PLANET It's a great big world out there – and it's getting more populated by the second. According to the United Nations, the world's population reached a whopping seven billion in October. It has been predicted that the population will hit eight billion by 2027. ▽ MONEY TROUBLES Financial woes continued in 2011 in several European countries. Since 2009, many countries overseas (most notably Greece, Ireland and Portugal) have joined the European sovereign debt crisis, forcing governments to refinance their debt with the help of banks and other third parties. Financial analysts and experts have pegged Italy and Spain as the next two countries in the European Union that could require bailouts. (Gts/Shutterstock)

▷ HOCKEY'S SADDEST DAY Russia's Kontinental Hockey League (KHL) and hockey fans around the world endured a catastrophic loss in September when a plane carrying the Lokomotiv Yaroslavl hockey team crashed near their home city. All but two of the 45 people on board – including a Canadian coach, Saskatchewan's Brad McCrimmon, and several former NHL players – were killed. (A flight attendant and one hockey player survived.) The International Ice Hockey Federation called the accident "the darkest day in the history of the sport." (AP Photo/Photo Agency KHL)

▷ A GOOD START Decades, if not centuries, after women were given the right to vote in other countries, Saudi Arabian women will finally be given the same right in future elections. Women will also be allowed to run for office in time for the country's next municipal elections in 2015. The decision, which was announced in September and lauded by activists, was seen as a step in the right direction towards modernizing women's rights – though Saudi women are still waiting to be gr[illegible] to drive, work, travel or undergo medical operations without the consent of their father or another male family member. ▷ KILLER COLLABORATION Fans couldn't help themselves when they learned that rap superstars Jay-Z and Kanye West would be teaming up for an album and a North American tour. Hailed as one of the top albums of the year, the project, called Watch the Throne, was nominated for four Grammy awards, with a win in the best rap song category for the track called "Otis." The original tour was supposed to be just 23 shows, but, due to popular demand, was expanded to 34. A European leg of another 23 shows was announced at the end of February 2012.

◁ BABY BEYJAY There was something special about Beyoncé's performance of her song "Love on Top" at the 2011 MTV Video Music Awards in August. She told the audience to stand so they could "feel the love that's growing inside of me," and opened her jacket to show off a pair of maternity pants. Baby Blue Ivy was born on January 7, 2012, the first child to Beyoncé and hubby Jay-Z; her parents have filed an application to copyright her name.

▽ SMASH HIT When Adele's first album, 19, went quadruple platinum in the UK in 2008, the music world knew she was a star on the rise. Now fast forward a couple of years to her second album, 21, and see a superstar in our midst. The album went 15 times platinum, winning Adele six Grammy awards – including song of the year for "Rolling in the Deep" – and the record for most Grammys won by a female artist in one night. This beautiful Brit even rivals the success of the legendary Beatles (and there were four of them!).

◁ LOST VOICES When singer-songwriter and notorious party girl Amy Winehouse was found dead in her home on July 23, the public surmised about the cause of death: While everyone mourned, many speculated that her substance abuse issues were to blame. A report released in October confirmed suspicions. The music industry lost another songbird less than a year later, when singer, actor and producer Whitney Houston passed away in a suite at the Beverly Hilton Hotel in February 2012. Her private funeral was a veritable who's who of musical and theatrical talent. Her cause of death has yet to be confirmed.

▽ FIREWORKS FOR KATY With the year Katy Perry had, it was no surprise that she took home MTV's coveted artist of the year title. The 27-year-old completed a world tour, had three number one singles (six from the same album through the end of 2010 and into 2011), made her screen debut as the voice of Smurfette in The Smurfs movie, launched her second fragrance, "Meow," and released a Barbie doll reflecting her style. She was also nominated for 10 VMAs, winning three, including video of the year, best collaboration and best special effects. Does the girl ever sleep?

▽△ SEPARATE WAYS After 30 years together, 2011 saw the breakup of 80s alternative rock band REM. Credited as a pioneer in their genre, the group enjoyed moderate success and a cult following for decades but announced in November that it was time to call it quits. They weren't the only ones, either. Popular rock band The White Stripes also split, stating that they wanted to "preserve what is beautiful and special about the band and have it stay that way."

◁ BIEBER AT THE BOX OFFICE We know teenage sensation Justin Bieber has a serious fan following, but is it worth more than $73 million? Apparently so. His concert documentary, Never Say Never, grossed more than anyone expected – including a little over $29 million on opening weekend, second to Adam Sandler's Just Go With It. The Biebs had success on the 2011 billboard, too, with his holiday album Under the Mistletoe topping the charts.

◁ FRIDAY FANS It's a simple concept: Start with what you're having for breakfast and end with what seat you're taking in the car on the way to a party. Set it to music and make a video. Kudos to you, Rebecca Black, for thinking of it first. Black's "Friday" performance was the most-watched YouTube video of 2011, with more than 180 million views (and we'll just ignore the 3 million-plus 'dislikes').

◁ ONE TO WATCH 2011 was a good, good year for Nicki Minaj. Her first studio album, Pink Friday, was released in late 2010 and enjoyed success after success in the months that followed – including seven singles on the Billboard at one time, a first for a solo female performer. Of course, with that accomplishment under her belt, MTV named the American-Trinidadian singer the 2011 rising star. The 29-year-old's second album, Pink Friday: Roman Reloaded, is set to be released in Spring 2012.

▷ THE NEXT BIG THING Last year was probably a costly one if you're an electronics buff – tablets and 3D televisions were all the rage. Apple users welcomed the iPad 2 – a thinner, lighter, faster tablet than the original – in March. Originally dubbed "the next PC," more than one million units were sold on its debut weekend (and to date, a reported 40 million-plus worldwide). There are more than 14,000 apps on the market, including the popular NetFlix, Angry Birds, Kindle, Facebook and Twitter. (Apple/MCT)

◁ TV REINVENTED Three-dimensional televisions hit stores in 2010 but made news in 2011 for some amazing new developments. Besides the release of bigger, better and brighter TVs, the end of the year also saw exciting advances overseas, including 3D gaming consoles (from Sony's PlayStation) and the ability to watch 3D shows without wearing those goofy-looking glasses. ◁ DRAWING ATTENTION Googling was a lot more quirky and colourful last year with Google Doodles – the search engine's illustrated nod to major holidays, events and other significant dates. While the premiere doodle dates back to 1998 (who knew?), the first interactive and video doodles debuted in 2011, commemorating science-fiction writer Jules Verne's 183rd birthday and silent film star Charlie Chaplin's 122nd birthday. △ HATS OFF Royal watchers around the world weren't the only ones enthralled by the wedding of William and Kate last April – fashionistas couldn't get enough of the exquisite fascinators worn by many of the couple's female guests. Wearing hats to weddings is a long-standing, centuries-old tradition among the Brits, but the intricate, opulent, whimsical and sometimes bizarre (we're talking to you, Beatrice and Eugenie) fascinators were the talk of the town. ◁ MISS-REPRESENTATION Au revoir, Mademoiselle! The government of France bid adieu to the title Mademoiselle in January 2012 when the prime minister's office banned it from use on official documents. The term, which has been used to address young, unmarried women for centuries, has been replaced by Madame, which has traditionally been reserved for older, married ladies. Two French feminist groups argued that calling a woman Mademoiselle is sexist and having to divulge marital status on documents is an "invasion of privacy." (www.madameoumadame.fr)

The story, which takes place in an unidentified time in the future in a nation called Panem (formerly known as North America), has sold millions of copies and was adapted to the big screen in short order. The first installment of the trilogy hit theatres in March 2012. (Andrew Tolson)

▷ MARRIED MESS After much media hoopla around their estimated $6 million wedding, trash TV queen Kim Kardashian and New Jersey Net Kris Humphries called it quits just 72 days into their marriage. Kardashian filed for divorce on October 31, 2011, but Humphries went one better in December and requested an annulment based on the grounds of fraud. Yikes – the couple met, married and divorced all within a single year.

△ PUBLICITY NIGHTMARE Baby-faced singing sensation Justin Bieber found himself all over the tabloids again this year – but not for his patented side-swept hair or his famous voice. No, the 18-year-old was faced with accusations of fathering a child born to a California woman named Mariah Yeater. The suit was eventually dropped, and Bieber recovered nicely in the news with his pursuit of popular teen actress Selena Gomez. (Gregg DeGuire/PictureGroup)

◁ WHAT'S IN A NAME Could it be? Have we seen the end of silly celebrity baby names? With kids called Apple and Moxie CrimeFighter in recent years, it seems ironic that old-fashioned monikers are a breath of fresh air. 2011 saw the births of Penelope (Tina Fey), Sadie (Christina Applegate) and Arthur (Selma Blair) among many others. If only Beyoncé and Jay-Z had received the memo – they named their daughter Blue Ivy in February 2012. (MCT)

△ BACK ON TRACK It was about time for Britney Spears to have a real comeback. The pop star previously known as a media train wreck – we all remember the shaved head – wrapped up her world tour, Femme Fatale, in late 2011, but she's also sporting a new rock on her left hand. Her former manager turned boyfriend Jason Trawick popped the question in December. Spears shared the news with her Twitter following by announcing "OMG. Last night Jason surprised me with the one gift I've been waiting for." (Jose Carlos Fajardo/Contra Costa Times/MCT)

△▷ THE END OF AN ERA You'd think Reg and Oprah could have chatted before both ending their careers in the same year – daytime television will never be the same. Oprah Winfrey, who had been hosting her own talk show for 25 years, said goodbye to her faithful audience in May, while Regis Philbin, a 28-year veteran of morning talk TV, said his farewell on Live with Regis and Kelly in November. (Michael Tercha/Chicago Tribune/MCT)

▷ VIOLET EYES Silver screen legend Elizabeth Taylor passed away of congestive heart failure on March 23, 2011. She was 79. The raven-haired beauty with her renowned purple irises starred in more than 50 films in her brilliant career and was a two-time Oscar winner. She was honoured for her contributions to the motion picture industry at the 2012 Academy Awards. (Los Angeles Times/MCT)

TELEVISION

▷ 90 YEARS YOUNG Betty White, best known for playing Rose on the 80s sitcom The Golden Girls, has made a comeback in recent years – including a starring role on TV's Hot in Cleveland – but she found herself in the limelight for a different reason in early 2012: The comedienne celebrated her 90th birthday with much TV Land hoopla in January, including an NBC special honouring her achievements. The actress, born in 1922, said she spent the day hanging out with her golden retriever, Pontiac. (AP Photo/Vince Bucci)

▷ THE NEW MAN Charlie Sheen's off-screen antics and a falling out with Two and a Half Men creator Chuck Lorre saw Sheen booted from the popular sitcom, opening a very big door for someone to replace him. That someone was the King of Twitter, Ashton Kutcher. The 33-year-old funnyman was introduced as Internet billionaire Walden Schmidt on the fall season premiere. (Roger Wong/INFphoto.com)

△ SCI-FI SENSATION The Vampire Diaries love triangle came to play at the Teen Choice Awards. The popular series swept the sci-fi categories, including signature surfboards for Nina Dobrev and Ian Somerholder, as best sci-fi/fantasy actor and actress, and Michael Trevino and Kat Graham for male and female scene stealers. And you thought vampires were so 2010. (Bob Mahoney/©CW/Courtesy: Everett Collection)

△ FUNNY BUSINESS Comedy is the name of the game these days, with a host of funny shows dominating weeknight television. Amy Poehler's Parks and Recreation and the documentary-style hit Modern Family lead the way for new shows Suburgatory and New Girl in the fall, with another selection of giggle-worthy programs starting up mid-season. Cue the laugh track for shows like Working It and Chelsea Handler's Are You There Chelsea? (Danny Feld/NBC/NBCU Photo Bank via AP Images)

△ REPEAT PERFORMANCE Guests at the 2011 Teen Choice Awards might have had a serious case of Gossip Girl déjà vu: The teen soap ran away with awards in three categories, including top drama yet again. After 100 million teen votes were cast, GG's leggy blonde Blake Lively and cutie Penn Badgley also took home the awards for best actress and actor in a dramatic series respectively. △ WINNER'S CIRCLE ABC's Modern Family, with a following of nearly 12 million viewers last year, was the big success story at the 2011 Emmys, nabbing five trophies – including outstanding comedy for the second year in a row. On the drama side, 1950s period drama Mad Men captured the top prize. Who knew an advertising agency could be so entertaining? (Allen J. Schaben/Los Angeles Times/MCT)

MOVIES

△ SPEED DEMONS If you thought The Fast and the Furious franchise had worn out its welcome, think again. The fifth film in the series, Fast Five, was released in April to major triumph. It departs from the street racing theme of the first four movies and instead focuses on typical action movie plotlines (yes, opening the doors to a whole new world for future FF movies). The film grossed more than $626 million worldwide, making it the 6th highest-grossing film of 2011 and the 57th of all time.

▷ MORE THAN MEETS THE EYE It's hard to believe it started as a toy line, but its success is clear. The third installment of the Transformer series, Transformers: Dark Side of the Moon, featured the same spectacular special effects seen in the first two movies (it is produced by Steven Spielberg, after all), and pulled in about $1.12 billion worldwide. While some critics panned the writing and length of this film, fans didn't seem to care and the movie was the second-highest grossing flick of 2011.

△ THE FINAL INSTALLMENT After ten years, billions of dollars in revenue and millions of movie-watchers, the Harry Potter film series finally came to an end in July. Harry Potter and the Deathly Hallows Part Two claimed the worldwide opening weekend record, pulling in $483.2 million. The final installment, revealing the fate of Harry and Lord Voldemort, was the highest grossing film of 2011 and closed the set – eight films – as the highest grossing series of all time.

△ BELLA'S BACK And the vampires have still got it. The second-to-last Twilight film, Breaking Dawn Part One, was released in November, with fans chomping at the bit (no pun intended) to see Bella's wedding dress and her half-vampire half-human baby with Edward. Easily claiming the number one slot on opening weekend with $139 million, the film grossed more than $705 million worldwide. Part Two, set to hit theaters in November 2012, is expected to do just as well if not better, given that it will bring the uber-popular series to a close.

△ IRON LADY INDEED Hollywood veteran Meryl Streep needs to make more room on her mantel. The formidable 62-year-old actress claimed her third Oscar at the 84th Annual Academy Awards – best actress for her portrayal of former British prime minister Margaret Thatcher in The Iron Lady. Streep has been nominated for 17 Oscars in her 33-year career, a record in the history of the awards.
(Allen J. Schaben/Los Angeles Times/MCT)

△ FUNNY GIRL Relatively unknown to motion pictures (but no stranger to TV), comedic actress Melissa McCarthy certainly made an impression in 2011. Her hilarious performance in Bridesmaids as Megan, the gruff sister-in-law-to-be of Maya Rudolph, is considered her breakthrough role, earning her BAFTA and Academy Award nominations for best supporting actress. The 41-year-old is currently starring in TV sitcom Mike and Molly.

▷ NEW TERRITORY When movie fans think of Martin Scorsese, they think of the grime and grit he's known for, not impeccable animated adventure. But, that's just what Scorsese delivered with Hugo, a 3D cartoon drama based on a novel called The Invention of Hugo Cabret. The film was critically acclaimed across the industry; critic Roger Ebert gave it four out of four stars, and it took home five of the 11 Oscars for which it was nominated.
(Al Seib/Los Angeles Times/MCT)

▷ DANCING SHOES He might not have been Kevin Bacon (the jury is still out), but Kenny Wormald sure can dance. The 27-year-old took on the role of Ren McCormack in the 2011 remake of the classic 80s dance movie Footloose. While the film stayed relatively true to the original – only the songs and dance moves had really been updated – Wormald and co-star Julianne Hough as the preacher's daughter made as entertaining a pair as Bacon and actress Lori Singer. (KC Bailey/©Paramount/Courtesy Everett Collection)

△ THE YEAR OF RYAN For Ryan Gosling fans, the fact that he wasn't nominated for an Academy Award this year was a travesty. The 30-year-old actor who got his start on The Mickey Mouse Club has shown his acting chops time and again, and 2011 was no exception. After his starring roles in Crazy, Stupid, Love, The Ides of March and Drive, the Canadian is touted as being one of the best in the biz but has yet to get close to the coveted Oscar.

△ BLONDE BOMBSHELL If you didn't know any better, to see Michelle Williams as Marilyn Monroe would make you think you were seeing a ghost. In My Week with Marilyn, the 30-year-old is a dead-ringer for the late Marilyn, in both appearance and mannerisms. Her portrayal of the late actress earned her the Golden Globe for best actress in a musical or comedy motion picture, as well as BAFTA and Academy Av[illegible]

▽ WHAT A CARD It looked like the Texas Rangers were going to take it all at the World Series in October. Twice in Game Six against the St. Louis Cardinals, they were one strike away from claiming the crown, but the Cards took the match-up in the bottom of the 10th, forcing Game Seven. The Cardinals won the final game 6-2, capturing their 11th MLB championship. (Ron T. Ennis/Fort Worth Star-Telegram/MCT)

▽ MANNING AND MADONNA Quarterback and MVP Eli Manning and the New York Giants triumphed over quarterback Tom Brady and the New England Patriots on Super Bowl Sunday 2012. The Giants won 21-17 at the Lucas Oil Stadium in Indianapolis, Indiana, in the most-watched telecast in U.S. television history with more than 165 million viewers. For those who weren't into the game, Madonna made her halftime show debut in an elaborate performance befitting of the queen of pop (and minus any sort of wardrobe malfunction!). ▽ SORE LOSERS Fans of the Boston Bruins were thrilled last June when the team won their first Stanley Cup championship since 1972. But fans of the opposing (and losing!) team, the Vancouver Canucks, took the loss hard. Riots – which saw more than 100 people arrested, 140 injured and an estimated $5 million in property damages – broke out in downtown Vancouver immediately after the Bruins' 4-3 series win over the Canucks. ◁△ LOCKED OUT There was not one but two lockouts in pro sports leagues last year, much to the sports fanatics' chagrin. The National Football League (NFL) faced a 130-day lockout, while the owners of the National Basketball Association (NBA) announced a work stoppage that lasted 161 days (its fourth in history). The NFL lockout ended before the start of their regular season, but the start of the NBA season was delayed. (AP Photo/John Bazemore)

△ CHERRY BOMB Canada's outspoken host of CBC's Hockey Night in Canada and Coach's Corner sounded off against the sport's violent history and called out three retired tough-guy enforcers – Jim Thomson, Chris Nilan and Stu Grimson – for their hypocritical stance on violence in hockey. After fans took to social media asking for Cherry's dismissal from HNIC (and the threat of legal action taken against him by the former players), Cherry apologized on Coach's Corner a couple of weeks later. △ A SPORT MOURNS Canadian freestyle skier and four-time Winter X Games gold medallist Sarah Burke died in January 2012 after sustaining a head injury in a fall while training at Park City Mountain Resort in Utah. The 29-year-old was known as a pioneer in the Super-Pipe event, and was instrumental in convincing the International Olympic Committee to add the sport to the program for the 2014 Olympic Winter Games in Sochi, Russia. Burke leaves behind a loving family, devoted teammates and her husband Rory Bushfield, a fellow freestyle skier. (Wade Blaine/Abaca Press/MCT)

△ HAPPY HOMECOMING Ecstatic Winnipeg residents welcomed back their National Hockey League (NHL) team, the Winnipeg Jets – previously theirs from 1972 to 1996 – following a 15-year absence. The original Jets franchise became the Phoenix Coyotes in 1996, but when the Atlanta Thrashers were sold in 2011, the team was relocated to Winnipeg and the Jets were reborn. Cue rejoicing fans here! (Chuck Myers/MCT)

△ SID'S NON-SEASON After missing the first 20 games of the NHL's 2011-2012 season due to side effects from the concussion he suffered in the previous season, Sidney Crosby made his return to the ice on November 21, 2011. Crosby stole the show, snagging two goals and two assists in the 5-0 Pittsburgh Penguins win over the New York Islanders. But after playing only seven games, a minor hit caused a recurrence of his concussion symptoms and prompted Crosby to put his health ahead of his skates. Sid returned to the ice in March 2012 and Penguins fans are keeping their fingers crossed that he is back for good. (Jim McIsaac/Newsday/MCT)

SCIENCE

▷ GONE TOO SOON On October 6, 2011, one of history's most successful, entrepreneurial, innovative and visionary inventors passed away. Steve Jobs will forever be remembered as the brains and heart behind Apple, the company he co-founded in the 1970s. Under his leadership Apple has transformed the way we use computers and the Internet, listen to music and use mobile devices. Jobs died at 56 after battling pancreatic cancer.

△ REAL ESTATE IN SPACE Is there life on other planets? Who knows. But in August, scientists discovered that it might just be possible to live on HD 85512 b, a planet about 36 light-years away from Earth in a galaxy far, far away. The temperature and cloud coverage suggests water may exist, which could one day make the planet habitable. (Wikipedia)

△ TOO CLOSE FOR COMFORT Like something out of the movies, Earth had a close encounter with a mid-sized asteroid back in November. The rock, also known as 2005 YU55, caught the attention of scientists far and wide for its rarity in size and proximity to Earth. Only about once every century does an asteroid so large pass us so closely. If even chunks of the rock's debris had reached us, we could have been facing major damage – cue Will Smith for a starring role in that story.

◁ LOST AND FOUND We've all heard of the Lost City of Atlantis – the metropolis that's believed to have been flooded by tsunamis thousands of years ago – but, according to new discoveries, it turns out Atlantis might not be missing anymore. Signs of the lost city were found under the marshlands and mud flats of southern Spain in 2011.

△ CELLPHONE SCARE The World Health Organization (WHO) has confirmed what your parents have been suspicious about for years – your favourite accessory (a.k.a. your cellphone) may increase the risk of developing brain cancer. The radiation emitted from iPhones, BlackBerries and Smart phones is "possibly carcinogenic." It's estimated that there are more than five billion mobile phones worldwide and researchers are still investigating the links to various cancers and other diseases. Now's a good time to get Bluetooth; like mom always says, it's better to be safe than sorry.
